Straightness Basics: How Jane Ehrhart Gets Horses and Riders Show-Ring Ready

Try this three-stride to three-stride exercise to improve straightness and practice focus.

Straightness Basics: How Jane Ehrhart Gets Horses and Riders Show-Ring Ready

PRACTICALHORSEMANMAG.COM

The days leading up to a show are great opportunities to make sure my students and horses are ready to shine. Whatever strengths and weaknesses a pair might have, refreshing the basics is a good idea. Establishing straightness and focus in a line is imperative to produce a high score in the hunter ring and a clear round in the jumpers. There's one exercise that you will usually find in my ring when getting ready for shows. It's a basic practice line with no fancy name, so we can call it the "three to three."

The DAUGHTERS

A childhood full of foxhunting has forged brilliant people, horses, and careers for three decorated stars of the show ring.

COVERTSIDE - SUMMER 2020

Some of today's successful young show jumpers share similar upbringings to Jenkins. It was the thrill of galloping across the rolling fields of Virginia that emboldened international grand prix show jumper Sloane Coles in and out of the ring. Her father, John Coles, is the Joint Master of Orange County Hounds in Virginia. Sloane now owns and operates Spring Ledge LLC, a top-class hunter/jumper facility located at Springfield Farm in the heart of Virginia's hunt country.

Bella Ciao: Back Out Front

JUMPMEDIAALLC.COM

Trainers Alessandro and Antonio Sano reviewed a daunting x-ray on the morning of April 19, 2019. Their three-year-old Thoroughbred filly Bella Ciao, owned by Cairoli Racing Stable and Magic Stables LLC, had just finished a breeze in 49 seconds flat when she pulled up from a fracture in her right front leg.

She exited the track at Gulfstream Park West, her home racetrack in Miami Gardens, FL, with her racing fate hanging in the balance.

Staff Picks: A Dream Home From Martha W. Jolicoeur

The team at Jump Media did some real estate fancying this week with the listings of Martha W. Jolicoeur, a Douglas Elliman Real Estate agent based in Wellington, FL.

Before devoting her life to real estate, Jolicoeur first made a name for herself among the equestrian community as an international show jumping athlete. After moving on from the show ring, she stepped into a role in the elite Douglas Elliman Real Estate Sports and Entertainment division. Jolicoeur exhibits the same passion she had for competing when matching her real estate clients with the homes and farms of their dreams. Having first joined the Wellington real estate community in 2005, Jolicoeur has become the go-to broker for buying and selling equestrian properties.

We scoured MarthasProperties.com for our favorite listings and are excited to share our top picks!

Preventing Buyer's Remorse

GUIDELINES TO ENSURE A SMOOTH PROCESS AND HELP AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT, AND EVEN LITIGATION, AFTER PURCHASING YOUR NEW HORSE.

SCHEDULE A PRE-PURCHASE EXAM

It's a common-sense step, but many buyers skip it. A pre-purchase exam (PPE) is a thorough physical examination of a horse performed by a veterinarian before purchase. It's the best way to ensure you're getting a healthy horse and to avoid the stress and expense of a return or litigation.

ARRANGE A TRIAL PERIOD

Many buyers request a trial period. This allows you to test-drive the horse in your own environment. It's a great way to ensure the horse is a good fit for you and your facility.

A BIT OF GOOD NEWS

Standing Ovation: Saddle Up and Read

Every week, Horse Nation teams up with Ovation Riding to recognize those doing good in the horse world. This month, they featured Saddle Up and Read for its efforts to combat illiteracy in North Carolina, and we couldn't get enough.

"The most rewarding part is seeing their faces the moment they see the horses - they just light up and it's amazing! It's like, a shy child - their parents are like, 'They never read at home,' or 'They never talk this much in public' - and the horses do that. They're just magical."
