Washington International Moves to Prince George's Equestrian Center in 2022

CHRONICLE OF THE HORSE

After two years of being held outdoors in North Carolina due to the coronavirus pandemic, the Washington International Horse Show will return to the Washington, D.C., area in 2022—but not to its traditional downtown home at the Capital One Arena.

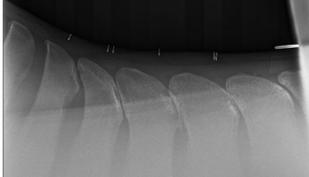

Instead, the show has been relocated to the Prince George's Equestrian Center in Upper Marlboro, Maryland.

Hand-in-Hand: Rescues and Law Enforcement Work Together for Horses in Need

HORSE NETWORK

When horses are rescued from neglect or abuse situations, oftentimes they're relocated to a local or nearby equine rescue facility. However, it's not uncommon for rescue organizations to be burdened with limited staff and funding, or an influx of horses putting them over capacity. Such was the case for Holland's Hustle, a 10-year-old Quarter Horse mare who arrived at Days End Farm Horse Rescue (DEFHR) in Woodbine, Maryland, in the fall of 2018.

A New Lease on Life for Kissing Spines With Surgical Intervention

THE PLAID HORSE

Palm Beach Equine Clinic is one of the foremost equine surgical centers in the world with three board-certified surgeons on staff, including Dr. Weston Davis. As a busy surgeon, Dr. Davis has seen many horses with the dreaded "kissing spines" diagnosis come across his table. Two of his most interesting success stories featured horses competing in the disciplines of barrel racing and dressage.

Hold My Beer: 21-Year-Old Horse and His Trainer Sweep Their CDI Small Tour Debut

CHRONICLE OF THE HORSE

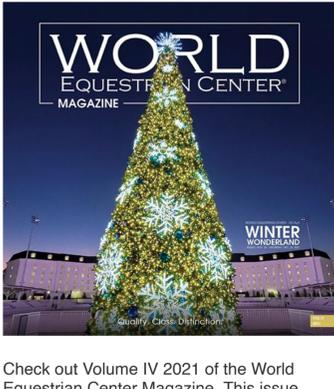

Days after she and her 21-year-old Farley 4 swept the small tour at the World Equestrian Center Dressage V CDI-W in Ocala, Florida, Chloe Fullar said she still is pinching herself to be sure she's not dreaming. The victory was an emotional one for Fullar, 37, who sold a pair of earrings she had inherited from her grandmother to pay the entry fee and travelled over 1,000 miles from her home in Berrien Springs, Michigan, to compete in her first CDI.

Maeve and Moose: Beating Cancer With the Help of the Cornell University Equestrian Team

SIDELINES MAGAZINE

Bedecked in a blue dress polka-dotted with rainbow unicorns, Maeve Rae-Bognar sat beside her mother in their Candor, New York, home with her usual bright grin and her arms wrapped around a rotund stuffed horse. Maeve bounced and giggled through the interview, just like any healthy, happy, horse-loving 9-year-old girl. Now, that's exactly what she is—and the Rae-Bognar family doesn't take that for granted.
