Molly Walsh rode Erosmith, owned by Annie Walsh, to the top of the podium in the $5,000 USHJA National Hunter Derby.

"Erosmith loves his handies," explained Walsh. "I think his boldness stands out the most in the ring, and he always gives a great effort over the jumps. He is actually my sister's horse, and he's been in the family for about 10 years. I took over the reins three or four years ago. We have had a good time together, and he's taught me a lot."

Ainsley Davis and Pretzel, owned by Carolyn Putney, were victorious in the $7,000 All In One Jumper Classic.

"I thought the course rode really nice," commented Davis. "During the course walk the lines were walking a little long, but when we went in there he was in front of my leg and everything came up nice. I just started leasing him in the winter. I haven't had him for very long, but he's been so great in all of our classes together."
